

CHANCE Intervention/Project profile, Fulda/Germany: Health information by the food industry

Name of the project	Project work of students Different kinds of health information from the food industry for consumers in different countries	Comment
Objective	Evaluation of nutritional information given to consumers with product labeling and other means of communication (websites, service hotlines)
Target group	Results are basis for future research on product labelling and other information sources of food industry
Responsible	University of Applied Science Fulda Department Nutritional, Food and Consumer Science
Co-operation partners	Latvian University of Agricultural Science
Period <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Single arrangement - Series - Permanent offer 	July 2008 to February 2009, June 2009 to February 2010 April 2010 to February 2011
Who, what (content headwords), how, where, number of participants	Three students from the master course International food business and consumer science Personell from the Latvian University of Agricultural Science
Spatial preconditions	Further research will include product labeling from countries outside the EU
Sustainability <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Short-term - Medium-term - Long-term 	Result of the project work will be included in current lectures
Transferability <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Different target group? - Different district? Other objectives? Precondition to repeat?	Precondition for further research on suitable labeling systems on food packages
Contact	Prof. Dr. B. Freytag-Leyer Prof. Dr. J. Hampshire University of Applied Science Fulda Department Nutritional, Food and Consumer Science	